HEADING WEST

To the old adage, "Head West, young man, head West," may need some clarifying phrases. Especially is this so if the persons are planning to live in Alaska, making new homesteads or opening businesses there.

Those who intend to do so are urged by the Federal Government to pack more than warm clothes. Prices on practically everything in the new country are much higher than in the continental United States.

Figures on overall cost of living in the United States list Seattle, Washington as one of the highest of the forty-eight connecting states. In comparing Seattle with Anchorage and Fairbanks in cost of living, the figures show that Anchorage costs are approximately twenty six per cent higher and the costs in Fairbanks are approximately thirty-six per cent higher than those in Seattle.

Topic in these two cost indexes were the cost of housing, which in the two Alaskan cities were seventy-seven to one hundred per cent higher than those in Seattle, and food, which was from twenty-eight to forty-six per cent higher than in Seattle, The Bureau of Land Management stated that homesteading in Alaska is particularly difficult, and sometimes impossible.

For those who are thinking of finding a new home and opportunity in the West, it may be well for them to find and secure reliable information in regard to their future plans.

Industry Selecting Graduates

Mr. Frederick R. Kappel, chairman of the Board of American Telephone and Telegraph Company, recently made a talk at Westminster College, in which he summed up a study of telephone company executives who were graduated from colleges between 1910 and 1950.

The tests were conducted on the top 10,000 company executives. The findings substantiated theories which the company's personnel division had anticipated and will definitely be a guide for the future in the Company's selection of personnel.

The Company is now convinced that a student's standing in his graduating class is the most important indicator of how he is likely to rise on the Company's ladder of progress.

Mr. Kappel said there were many other equally important factors which had to be taken into consideration, such as integrity, creativity, personality characteristics, as well as the progress in grades.

These have always been individual characteristics which were judged in any case, regardless of grades or any other tests. He stated that students from below average colleges who were top students were more frequently successful than average students from top schools.

Every indicator pointed to the rank in class as the most important quality, rather than the school attended. Of the personnel tested, the top third in salary for their level of experience in the Company, over half came from the top one - third of their classes. Even more significant, less than one-quarter came from the bottom of the academic rung.

These statements and disclosures should be of importance to every student who is now in the process of receiving an education. Even a student not desiring to be employed by some large company will probably find the same test will prove true in any field he chooses upon graduation.

ABOUT YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY

By: C. Leonard Smith, Jr.

When you went to work this morning, you probably thought, "Just another day, very much like the other 23,742 in my life". Wait a minute! Did you think that?

If you did, it means you are now 65 years old. 65 years old and still working; right along. Don't intend to retire for quite some time yet?

That's fine. The United States Government believes that people should continue working as long as they want to. Retirement is a good thing IF YOU LIKE RETIREMENT.

If you don't like retirement, it is a bad thing to have to retire. That's why the Government feels it's up to each person to decide for himself.

In fact, the social security law has special provisions for people who don't retire. Although old-age insurance benefits are paid mostly to retired people, workers 72 and over can receive their full monthly social security benefits even though working full time.

Workers under 72 will have some of their benefits withheld if they earn over $1,200. How much depends on their total earnings, and the amount of benefits payable. In some cases, though, people may earn more than $4,000 a year and still receive some benefits.

If you are over 65, still working, and have never applied for social security benefits, it's a good idea to check with your local social security office.

The people there may have good news in the form of a green I B M card that is as good as money. . . a Government check representing money owed you. Only one way to find out for sure. Contact your local representative who will be at the Court House in Appomattox on the fourth Monday of each month at 10 a. m.
